Ladies' Department.

Postmaster's wrought with gold, green and blue beads in seen on the baguette, and collar of a mantle of black and blue. Shrimp pink silk is also employed in the Parisian wraps are made of superb Indian fabric, brooches heavily woven with threads of real gold, and again grounds in pale and neutral tints, broadened with rich, dark colors in flowers in raised velvet, these beautifully shaded at their edges.

Belge wool is the material in a dress for a girl of twelve years. The round skirt is trimmed with five graduated bands of real high collar, and the sleeves trimmed with the velvet. A brown fall is also heavily adorned at the side, falling in long curls and loops at the side.

A favorite combination is green, blue and "mauve."

With black foliage gray gloves with broad embroidery of black silk on the back, are worn.

Fur will probably be worn as garniture for indoor gowns this winter.

Delicate passementerie in "ropes" and beads and sequins are seen on dresses of woolen.

The old chianti lace is to be revived, and it is seen in fresh and handsome patterns. They are to be worn in elegant autumn wraps. In black lace several new patterns show thread and foot designs beautifully interwoven, and in lovely white chianti lace, these are shown with a new and soft, and beautiful as Lyons tulle, with interwoven devices of Milanese, Spanish and old Venetian patterns wrought upon their airy surfaces. The fabric and designs in Spanish, Chianti or Venetian lace are very choice. A design shows an scallop with a delicate figure in Spanish and the next in Chianti.

Low cut dresses are usually without sleeves.

The Fedora hats are out of date. All bodies open over gowns or pashas.

The correct thing for a bride's travelling costume is a checked coat of black and white. Woolen goods in black and white will be used extensively in costumes for little girls, and expensive trimming will not be banished. This will be a return to common sense.

An immense display of stripes is shown in materials for dinner gowns. Wide and narrow stripes of fall, Franconia and velvet or plush in novel arrangement of color, the silk being in most cases of the lighter color. Moss-green plush on velvet, tulle velvet on chambray, blue and gold on dark blue, and dark blue on sea green or pale green, are among the newest harmonies and contrasts.

The ladies are admiring military gowns and cords, which are among the novelties for garniture. Broad trimmings that follow an intricate pattern of curves and circles are much used. Some of the broad trimmings are ten inches in width, and is made of at least three-eighths of an inch wide.

High collars and full ruffles it is reported are to be abandoned, and replaced by wide, low collars exposing the throat.

The Russian redingote is out in the black in almost exact resemblance of a gentleman's great coat, the skirts long and straight up the back. There are lapels, large buttons, and a rolling collar. A favorite material for a redingote for the street, is golden brown or seal brown silk plush.

In London circular cloaks have come in to favor. Neutral tints lined with some bright color are used.

Upon mantles and redingotes, as well as upon pashas, vests, sleeves and belts, embroidery is seen in great profusion.

Most of the dressy autumn wraps are still made quite short at the back, fitting the form in graceful curves. The sleeves, so called, are in a piece with the garment, thus serving to protect the upper portion of the arm without altogether taking the place of the sleeve proper. The fronts of many of these mantles are loose and limp, like the old-fashioned "talma," though other models show designs in regular cloak shape, with close fitting sleeve, French back, the fronts cut with two deep folds, and fitting the figure very closely.

Over blouse bodices, peasant bodices, corsets and brooches are worn.

The Paris Fall Styles.

The Ladies Were Never More Gracefully or Tastefully Arrayed.

Lucy Hooper's Paris Letter to the Telegraph.

The styles for the ensuing winter and autumn are now fully developed, and I must say that the feminine division of humanity was never more gracefully and tastefully arrayed. The threatened big bonnets have not made their appearance, having been denounced by some of the Parisian ladies, who have found no one to copy them. The charming and becoming little capotes remain in vogue, with very high trimmings in front. They are composed of broad bands of velvet, with high trimmings in front. ## How to Care for the Complexion.

Cleanliness is a necessary part of beauty of the complexion, though it does not play a great part in the health of the skin.

Water is serviceable to the skin in only moderate amount, and at moderate temperature. Very cold or warm water, when used in excess, diminishes the elasticity of the skin and its power of resistance to external irritants.

Distilled and so-called soft water are more suitable for washing and less irritating than hard water.

The hands are usually preferable to the soft potash soap for toilet purposes. The quality of soaps depends upon the quality of their constituents, and the thoroughness of their saponification. Good soaps must not contain free alkali, or any foreign irritating substance. The addition of moderate quantities of perfumes does not materially change the quality.

Simple, finely-ground powders, such as starch, magnesia, etc., are entirely innocuous and often act as a useful protection against external irritants.

Frequent application of alcohol (as in bay rum, Florida water, cologne sprays, etc.) abrades the water of the skin, makes it dry and brittle and impairs its nutrition. This is also true of glycerine.

All toilet washes containing alcohol to any considerable extent should be avoided. This is true to a still greater extent of other additions to washes, such as carboxylic substances, mineral acids, certain essential oils, etc.

Camphor acts merely as a bleaching powder. This is also true of benzoic resin, sulphur flowers and substances containing fat.

The use of sweetening oils and fats should be employed to a greater extent than is now done for toilet purposes.

This is particularly true with regard to the growth of the hair. The nutrition of the scalp should be increased by the rational applications of fats (for example in the form of oil baths by means of the application of a night of a sponge soaked in oil upon the scalp), and the greater use of simple powders. These should be applied to the roots of the hair rather than the shafts.

Substances should be avoided or sparingly used, which abraded water from the skin and the roots of the hair.—From Zenopsis on Skin Diseases.
